

STEPHANY HITCHCOCK JEWELRY

A Treasure for Our Champions

The 2009 Aiken Horse Show is proud to present our four champions with a piece of fine custom jewelry by Stephany Hitchcock of New York. The youngest grandchild of Thomas and Louise Hitchcock, Stephany is even better known for her extensive work as a stage actress and jewelry designer.

Stephany studied at the renowned Gemological Institute in New York City, where she studied the properties of colored stones and diamonds, and emerged as an expert identifier and quality appraiser of gemstones. These skills would serve her well later as a private designer.

Over the years, Stephany designed and created jewelry when the spirit moved her – and when time allowed amid her many theatrical pursuits. Making sales to several prominent clients started a chain reaction that stimulated demand and invigorated her business.

Today Stephany's designs are inspired by unusual and rare colored gemstones. Stephany works in 18 karat gold and produces rings, earrings, bracelets, necklaces, and custom pieces. She is represented by jewelry galleries around the United States and the U.S. Virgin Islands ... including Carol Saunders Gallery in Columbia.
